DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 10, 12-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rudell et al (5,195,745) in view of Turangan (5,316,294).

Claim 10, Rudell et al shows a combination throwing projectile and glove, the throwing projectile (football 10, 19 or 42) includes two tapered ends and a central section progressively enlarged between the two ends (see figure 1), said projectile having at least one patch (VELCRO tab 44) or alternatively a band of VELCRO (20) attached thereon; and a corresponding one of a full glove (34), a partial glove (60), a wrist strap (28) or a finger band (67) having at least one patch (tab 25, 26; 64, 65; 41; or 88) thereon, the glove is worn by a user. Rundell et al shows the at least one patch is positioned on the object (such as a football) so that when the object is held in typical fashion, there is interaction between the VELCRO on the glove and the VELCRO on the projectile, and wherein the at least one fingerpad of one of said plurality of fingers is positioned adjacent to said pad, said pad having a plurality of mating fastener elements thereon complementary to said mating fastener elements on said at least one patch, said mating fastener elements on said at least one patch. Rudell et al does not expressly disclose the patch being positioned on either of said tapered ends.

Art Unit: 3711

Turangan shows a training aid including a football (21) having two tapered ends and a central section progressively enlarged between the two ends (see figure 4), and including at least one patch (strips 54), wherein the at least one patch (strips 54) extends over both tips of said football (see figure 5), said at least one patch having a plurality of male or female mating fastener elements thereon (see column 3, lines 30-34), and a flexible glove (10) having lateral areas positioned adjacent the finger pads (hook fasteners 44) of a user wearing said glove (10); the glove including a plurality of fingers, and at least one positioned on a lateral area of the index finger of said glove (see figure 2). Turangan teaches that it is desireable to include VELCRO over the ends of a football, since a football is typically thrown with its end sections leading, the absence of VELCRO over their end sections has made this type of ball particularly difficult to catch with a mitt (see column 1, lines 30-34). In view of Turangan it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have positioned at least one patch on the tip of Rudell et al's football, the motivation being in order to aid in catching the football with a mitt, glove, band etc. Rudell et al further shows said mating fastener elements disengage from said complementary mating elements upon a player handling said football.

It is noted that a recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim.

Regarding claims 12 and 13, Rudell et al shows said mating elements on said patch or patches comprise hook and loop elements (refer to the figures).

Regarding claim 14, Rudell et al shows the material of said glove is formed of an elastic material, which would include natural and/or synthetic rubber.

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments filed 07 October 2010 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. In response to applicant's argument that the mating fastener elements disengage from the complementary mating elements upon a player kicking the football, a recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. The device of Rudell et al is capable of performing the claimed step.
